

Department of Religious Studies

Program Outcome: The Department of Religious Studies offers systematic and scientific study of Religion. The main objective of this program is to provide the knowledge of different Indian and Semitic religions and their scriptures. Through this program students will develop a sophisticated appreciation for the complexity of religious cultures and communities. They can further enrol in M.A, M.Phil. or Ph.D courses.

Course Outcome I (CO-I)

This course inculcates the knowledge of beliefs, practices, scriptures and rituals of Indian religions. Students will also get the knowledge of primary Sikh sources, Institutions and concepts of Sikhism.

Course Outcome II (CO-II)

This course imparted knowledge of beliefs, practices, scriptures and ritual's of Western religions. Students will also get the knowledge of prominent religious movements of Punjab and India.

Course Outcome III (CO-III)

Students will get the knowledge of different methodological approaches to understand religion. It discusses the origin and impact of religion on individual and society. This course also discusses Sikh philosophical concepts and important Bani's (text) of Sri Guru Granth Sahib.

Certificate course in Sikh Studies

Program Outcome:

This course will encourage the students to understand basic concept of Sikhism. Students having different religious background will get an opportunity to experience the essence of Sikhi. Hence, it would be an eye opening experience which will allow the students live there life on the basic principles of Sikhism.

Scope of the Course:

Learning about the Sikh way of life and how it has been understood over time is more important today than before. This course will initiate the students to learn about Sikh way of life which will make them a loving and responsible human being. This particular course will also assist the students to opt the subject of Sikh studies for future research. Also it would be beneficial in acquiring jobs in religious organizations.